Meet the Author

Tim Minnich brings to life the fantastic “Great White Hurricane” of 1888 with his novel Blizzard!! The Great White Hurricane.

Lost to living memory, this historic storm changed not only lives, but informed the very cityscape of New York City and other Mid-Atlantic and New England communities. More than four hundred souls perished as the entire region suffered isolation due to broken communication lines, buried roads and paralyzed transit systems.

Young meteorologist Will Roebling navigates his way through the intricacies of emerging weather science, bureaucratic intrigue, vagaries of office politics, and the perplexities of romance to discover subtle signs heralding a cataclysmic storm bearing down on a city fully expecting an early spring. Though he managed to predict the storm's approach, even Will was caught unprepared by the storm's ferocity and its impact on his newly-adopted home city—and the people he cared most about.

Minnich, author, meteorologist and air quality consultant is a long-time resident of Freehold Borough. Copies of the book will be available for purchase.
